Language and travelling

Have you ever been abroad? It's a _____ question that comes up when you study a foreign language. But it's an important question. For summer holidays people mostly go to the south. And they will say a few words about their trip to Egypt or to Turkey. There are quite a lot of popular resorts with so many Russian people there, that the _____ can speak and understand Russian. Even if you want, you will hardly have an opportunity to practise your foreign language. And if you spend time surrounded by people from your own country and speaking your native language, we can hardly say that such places should be included in the _____ "abroad".

NOTE

It's really interesting to go somewhere on your own. If you travel as a _____ in a group, you will not need your foreign language skills, everything is predestined. You just come to some place, see some sights there, then they take you to another place and that's all. You'll understand why you are learning or have already learnt English only when you have arrived in a country and face the problem of communication there. Just start speaking, it's easy!

TOURISM

I know some people who travel being _____ to speak any foreign language. You shouldn't be afraid. All the European countries are worth seeing. As for more exotic countries situated in Africa or South America, it's up to you to decide whether you want to see _____ or not. When travelling you should know the traditions, customs, gestures and a lot of other things connected with local culture and communication in the place you are going to. Professional travellers are unique people – they can tell you a lot about their personal experience and the situations they have got into.

Travelling is an expensive hobby. Today you can come across a lot of articles instructing you how to go hitch-hiking. It's the _____ way to travel and to see the world. And it may become a good language practice for you. We live in the biggest country of the world that crosses nine time zones. And still many people are crazy about _____ abroad. Don't you think it would be a good idea to see the beauty of our home country before going abroad?

GO

I think it's _____ to go to one country at one time. There are a lot of tours that offer you to visit a wide range of places during a one-week trip. And you are not likely to have enough time to get _____ with these places. Choose one country and go there for a week, be a part of it. Practice your language. And you will be happy to carry the reminiscences through your whole life.
